DESCRIPTION

Pollock armchair designed by Charles Pollock in the early 1960s and produced by Knoll in the United States.

The armchair is based on a four-star polished cast aluminum base. The padded seat and backrest are upholstered in taut black leather, creating a controlled contrast with the metal structure. The design favors clean lines and direct functionality, characteristic of Charles Pollock's modernist approach.

Seat height is manually adjustable by unscrewing the mechanism, allowing a simple and precise adjustment. The Pollock armchair stands as an emblematic example of postwar American executive seating, reflecting the long-standing collaboration between Charles Pollock and Knoll.

Seat height adjustable from 17.3 to 18.9 inches.
