DESCRIPTION

Solide elm daybed produced around 1970 by the Ateliers Réunis de Basse-Normandie (Atenor) as part of a furniture production intended for residential and collective settings, particularly in mountain environments.

Made from solid elm, the bed features a robust structure with clearly defined sections which incorporates a large integrated storage drawers, discreetly opened through cut-out handles on the front. The design emphasizes structural clarity and the natural qualities of wood, avoiding any unnecessary ornamentation.

Bears the original label under the base.

Can accomodate a one-person mattress.

Edition : Ateliers Réunis de Basse Normandie, Avranches, France.
